Imports and Exports of Machinery and Electronics

机电产品进出口

Overview of China's imports and exports of machinery and electronics in the first eight months

今年前 8 月机电产品进出口概况

According to the Customs, China's imports and exports totaled USD 2352.53 billion in the period of Jan.-Aug., 2011, up 25.4% year on year. Whereas, the exports amounted to USD 1222.63 billion, up 23.6%, and the imports saw USD 1129.9 billion, up 27.5%. China's trade surplus stood at USD 92.73 billion during the period, down by 10% year on year. Among the figures, the imports and exports of machinery and electronics were USD 1184.16 billion, accounting for 50.33% of the total trade and increasing by 18.25% year on year. Whereas, the exports of machinery and electronics totaled USD 691.61 billion, accounting for 57% of China's total exports and increasing by 19% year on year; and the imports of machinery and electronics totaled USD 452.55 billion, accounting for 43.5 % of China's total imports and increasing by 17.5% year on year.

The survey conducted by CCCME showed that the expectations for exports in the next four month of 2011 were relatively optimistic with diversified points of views. Despite of being pressed by rising costs and streaming profits, 66% of surveyed companies expected steady growth for their exports in 2011, and 16% of them saw even situation compared with that of 2010 while 18% of them would be downwards.

The growth rate of China's imports and exports of machinery and electronics was expected as 15% in the next four month of 2011 and 17% for the whole year. The trade surplus of 2011 would exceed that of 2010, i.e. USD 270 billion.
